Festival Jury Operation

While watching a fulldome show or film each Jury member should evaluate the content in accordance with the following basic criteria:

- Scientific credibility
- Compliance with fulldome criteria (original fulldome shows get more scores than the ones initially made for flat screens)
- Video quality
- Sound quality
- Presentation logic (the extent to which a show supports unmosaic thinking)
- Content novelty and originality
- Grammatical correctness (voice over and comments)

The above-mentioned criteria are of different importance.

The Organizing Committee and the Festival Jury can expand the list of criteria.

While evaluating each film, the Jury members mark it from 1 to 10 scores. The given scores are summed up in accordance with the importance of the above-mentioned criteria. The importance of these criteria can vary in each category.

Besides awards in all the categories, the Festival Jury can also grant special prizes.

On the last session, the Festival Jury discusses all the shows and votes which show should be granted an award or special prize in each category. The main (but not the only one) criterion for granting an award is an average score given by the Jury members.

All the Jury members take part in evaluating fulldome shows and granting awards in each category, except for:

- authors whose fulldome shows or films have been included into the Festival program
- representatives of the companies which sent their fulldome shows or films to the Festival.

The Jury members who don't take part in evaluating the fulldome content and further voting have a right to join the discussion.

A People's Choice award will be given to the fulldome show or film that gets a higher average score after the viewers' questionnaires are proceeded. The viewers who are also authors of the fulldome content or are representatives of the corresponding companies cannot evaluate their own works. The Festival Jury cannot fill in the forms handed to viewers.

Veto power. Each Jury member has a right to impose a veto over granting an award to some show or film (including a People's Choice award). The decision to impose a veto should be explained (for instance, a Jury member thinks that the film is based on anti-scientific facts or promotes anti-science, etc.).

Awarding Ceremony

The Festival Organizing Committee defines the nature of awards and the procedure of their distribution.
